

Instructor: Date:

Learner: Regional Branch:

Program: Center:

CONTENT

- Let's Start! • Let's Explore! • Let's Practice! • Extension Activity • Target Words • Learning Points

Let's Start!

Where did the Aboriginal Australians come from?

Learning Outcome

Describe detailed facts about events or actions in work and social contexts, in written or spoken situations.

Ask your partner:

- Do you consider it important to care about cultural heritage? Why?
- What do you know about the Colombian Aboriginal people?

Can Do Statements

- I can talk about different cultures and civilizations.
- I can express a statement by focusing on the action.
- I can report facts about events or actions.

Let's Explore!

The Aboriginal people want to live in harmony *with nature.

* When you live in "harmony" with something or someone, you live in peace with them.

Instructions: Read the text aloud.

The earliest definite human remains to be found by archaeologists in Australia are those of Mungo Man, dated at 40,000 years old. Trying to tie the DNA of this group of people to the Aboriginal people in Australia has been unsuccessful. However, findings show that it's possible to relate the Aborigines to another group of people arriving in Australia from Africa 50,000 years ago.

About 500 Aboriginal tribal groups are to be identified in different regions of the Australian continent. These tribes are noted as speaking different languages and following different lifestyles. However, it is to be emphasized that all share a belief in the importance of land and family.

The Aborigines have been able to live in harmony without leaders or heroes. Harmony instead, is to be brought about by staying in tune with nature. One way of keeping this connection to nature and spiritual forces is through storytelling.

Their songs and stories are sung and told to celebrate Dreamtime, the mythical time when the world was created. Some stories seem to be focused on animals. Others talk about the three spirits: the Yowie, exemplifying the soul, the Doowee, representing the dreams, and the Mulloowil embodying the shadow spirit, all of which are to be found in everyone.

Today, through Dreamtime storytelling, art, and language, Australia's Aborigines still maintain a connection to their ancient culture and traditions, and keep them by passing them to the next generation.

Let's Practice!

World cultures are an interesting topic to be discussed.

Instructions: Choose the option that best completes the sentence. Practice saying the complete sentences aloud.

1. About 500 Aboriginal tribal groups _____ in different regions of the Australian continent.
a) are to be identifying b) are to be identified c) are to identify
2. However, it is to _____ that all share a belief in the importance of land and family.
a) emphasizes b) emphasized c) be emphasized
3. Harmony instead _____ about by staying in tune with nature.
a) is to be brought b) is to bring c) is to be bringing
4. Some stories _____ on animals.
a) seem to be focus b) seem focus c) seem to be focused
5. All of the Native legends _____ in everyone.
a) are finding b) are to be found c) are to found

Let's Practice!

Let's remember the Australian Aborigines' history.

Instructions: Proofread the sentences. Circle and correct the mistakes. Read the sentences aloud. Check your pronunciation with your instructor. Rewrite the sentences correctly.

1. The earliest definite human remains to be find by archaeologist in Australia are those of Mungo Man.

2. About 500 Aboriginal tribal groups is to be identify in different regions of the Australian continent.

3. All tribes shares a belief in the importances of land and family.

4. One way of keeping these connection to nature and spiritual forces are through storytelling.

5. Their songs and stories are sing and tell to celebrated Dreamtime, the mythical time when the world was created.

Extension Activity

Recount a Dreamtime legend.

Instructions: Complete the following steps. Fill in the Self-Assessment.

- Find an Australian Aboriginal dreamtime story.
- Take notes on the main points.
- Put your notes on a timeline and add vocabulary to enhance the story with vocabulary for that culture.
- Practice telling the story aloud using your timeline and notes.
- Tell a partner the story.
- Discuss why you think the Aboriginal people feel this story is important.

Self-Assessment

Yes No

I find and read an Australian Aboriginal dreamtime story.

☐ ☐

I take notes and add vocabulary words to enhance it.

☐ ☐

I practice recounting the story aloud.

☐ ☐

I tell the story to someone.

☐ ☐

I discuss the meaning and importance of the story.

☐ ☐

Target Words

- archaeologist (noun): a person who studies past civilizations
e.g. Archaeologists in Australia found the earliest definite human remains.
- human remains (noun): bones or tissue of the dead
e.g. The earliest definite human remains found by archaeologists in Australia are dated at 40,000 years old.
- Aboriginal people (noun): one way of naming Australia's indigenous people e.g. The majority of Aboriginal people in Australia live in the eastern states.
- unsuccessful (adjective): not achieving a result e.g. Trying to tie them to the Mungo people has been unsuccessful.
- Aborigines (noun): a second way of naming Australia's indigenous people e.g. The Aborigines lived in Australia.
- harmony (noun): living in peace with e.g. The Aborigines have been able to live in harmony without leaders or heroes.
- to emphasize (verb): to make more obvious
e.g. It is to be emphasized that all share a belief in the importance of land and family.
- spiritual forces (noun): what animates living things e.g. One way of keeping this connection to nature and spiritual forces is through storytelling.
- to stay in tune with (expression): to keep having a good understanding of e.g. Harmony instead, is to be brought about by staying in tune with nature.
- Dreamtime (noun): aboriginal mythology
e.g. Today, through Dreamtime storytelling, art, and language, Australia's Aborigines still maintain a connection to their ancient culture and traditions.

Learning Points

Passive Infinitives: Focusing on the Action

If the subject of the sentence is the agent (the doer), you use an active sentence with an active infinitive.

If the subject is not the agent, we use a passive infinitive.

Compare these two sentences:

Active: I've got so many library books to return.

Here the subject is I, who performs the action (return).

Passive: All library books have to be returned on time.

Here, the subject is not identified. In this case, we use a passive infinitive.

Look at the chart for the structure of the passive infinitive.

Structure	Example
Subject + to be + past participle	The earliest remains of humans to be found by archaeologists are those of Mungo Man in Australia.

Examples:

- About 500 Aboriginal tribal groups are to be identified in different regions of the Australian continent.
- However, it is to be emphasized that all share a belief in the importance of land and family.
- Harmony instead, is to be brought about by staying in tune with nature.
- Some stories seem to be focused on animals.
- All of which are to be found in everyone.

Learning Points

Gerunds

A gerund looks like a verb but acts like a noun.

Gerunds are like nouns, because they can act as the subject, object or subject complement in a sentence:

- Shopping costs a lot of money.
- I don't like driving.
- My favorite hobby is singing.

Gerunds can also have objects and be followed by modifiers.

Drinking alcohol can cause health problems. (object)

Drinking too much alcohol can cause health problems. (modifier)

Like nouns, we can use gerunds with adjectives, articles and determiners, like pronouns:

- *pointless questioning
- the writing of this film
- his smoking of cigarettes

Examples:

- However, findings show that it's possible to relate the Aborigines to another group of people arriving in Australia from Africa 50,000 years ago.
- Trying to tie the DNA of this group of people to the Aboriginal people in Australia has been unsuccessful.
- Harmony instead, is to be brought about by staying in tune with nature. One way of keeping this connection to nature and spiritual forces is through storytelling.
- One way of keeping this connection to nature and spiritual forces is through storytelling.
- Others talk about the three spirits: the Yowee, exemplifying the soul, the Doowee, representing dreams, and the Mulloowil embodying the shadow spirit.

